Taken from: Body & Mind – Inside Story from Expat Living's August 2009 magazine

When we learned that my father had lung cancer that had metastasized to his backbone, we sought treatment at Johns Hopkins Singapore International Medical Centre.

My dad underwent one full cycle of chemotherapy and two rounds of maintenance chemotherapy under the care of Dr Alex Chang. The practitioners, nurses and staff at JHS were caring and helpful during what was an extremely difficult time for my family. I felt comfortable leaving my parents in Singapore when I had to return to Jakarta for work, because I knew they were in good hands. Even after we took my father back to Jakarta, I was able to communicate with the doctors and nurses at JHS by phone and email.

I can speak for my entire family when I say that we are happy with the care that my father received at JHS. We know that he was being treated by the very best.
